

Bartering Is On The Rise Among Small Businesses

March 19, 2009

It's been around longer than currency.

With the economy in a slump, small businesses are going back to a barter system.

It's all through a third party broker called Trade Business Exchange.

When you sign up, you become a member and you get your own account.

When you sell goods and services you get trade dollars or credit in your account. Then you can use those trade dollars to barter with any member.

Currently, there 1800 members from all sorts of industries.

Mary McCandless from Spahhh.com has been able to trade plenty of her body scrubs and oils for various things like Persian rugs, a gas fireplace and even regular service for her fish tank.
